Resources

New York State Office of Mental Health
1-866-270-9857 (information and referral)
http://www.omh.state.ny.us

The Children’s Plan
http://www.omh.state.ny.us/omhweb/engage

Local County Mental Health Department Contact Information
http://www.clmhd.org/about/countydirectory.aspx

Families Together of NYS
518-432-0333
http://www.ftnys.org

This information is published by:

New York State
David A. Paterson
Governor

Office of Mental Health
Michael F. Hogan, Ph.D.
Commissioner

http://www.omh.state.ny.us
October 2008

Grades 9 to 12
(early to late adolescence)
Social and emotional learning is the way a child develops the ability to experience, regulate and express emotions, form close, secure relationships; explore the environment; and learn.

What to expect

Children develop at their own unique pace, so it’s impossible to tell exactly when yours will learn a given skill. The characteristics below will give you a general idea of the changes you can expect as your child gets older.

Ninth Graders

- Are insecure, moody and painfully self-absorbed. Friends and social activities rule—cliques and peer groups take the place of family and sometimes parents find themselves scorned and rejected
- Forget about individuality and give way to the “Everybody’s doing it” mentality
- Are full of drama over the smallest events—the rumor mill is in high gear

Tenth Graders

- Are learning how to juggle freedom with responsibility

Eleventh Graders

- May behave like a yo-yo and display a mixture of anxiety and cockiness
- Are becoming more sophisticated but there may be an odd disconnect between intellect and action
- Are increasingly fascinated with logic and are itching to challenge yours
- Use parents as sounding boards to develop their own positions

Twelfth Graders

- Are apt to be procrastinators and may like to party
- Are often hypersensitive to reprimands or criticism and mask their fear of failure with an outward bravado
- Enjoy freedom, mobility and energy and are proud of their increasing independence and competence
- May seem over sentimental about their relationships with peers

Ideas for Parents

There are many things you can do to promote your child’s social and emotional success:

- Support your child’s efforts and praise accomplishments.
- Listen and openly talk with your child.
- Recognize that your child’s feelings are real and be careful not to minimize or dismiss them.
- Understand your child’s need to be like his peers.
- Tolerate (within reason) your child’s developing likes and dislikes in clothes, hairstyles, music.
- Encourage your child’s goals and plans for the future.
- Spend time together as a family.
- Educate your child about risks associated with alcohol and drug use.
- Talk with your child about the physical changes in puberty that affect height, weight, and body shape.
- Avoid critical statements or nagging about eating, weight or appearance.
- Show an interest in your teen’s school life.

Teen Tip

As children move towards adulthood, they may continue to feel a need to conform but gradually begin to work toward their own goals. They want to be respected as young adults and sometimes will resist a controlling adult. Most importantly, they need an environment that stresses honesty, fairness and responsibility.